- What the Eurozone represents
- The characteristics of the five main institutions
- The characteristics of the eight key community bodies

WORD FROM THE AUTHOR

« The idea of forming an economic and political group of European countries emerged at the end of the Second World War. In 1957, representatives from six countries (West Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg) laid the foundations of the current European Union by signing the Treaty of Rome. Since then, many countries have become members of the European Union (EU), which is today composed of 28 member states.

The Eurozone is formed of European Union member countries who have adopted the euro as their single currency. There are currently 19 Eurozone countries. The European Union is managed by five main institutions and eight key community bodies. »
